Not illustrated. 1868 Excerpt: .of some perishable ornament to the wrists; thirty-seven beads, and several portions of rings. On two of the finger bones were found silver rings. There were also one bead on a ring, and a small gold ornament, with a garnet set in a filigree border. Over one skeleton, which was about three feet in the ground, was laid a great quantity of pieces of limestone, none of them bearing any marks of workmanship, nor did any show the action of fire. Close by, in a woman s grave, there were 120 beads, mostly small and of blue glass, but some were egg-shaped of glass, and a large lump of crystal for the centre bead, which was not round, but had only the angles worked off. But the relic which excited the greatest interest amongst the workmen, and has since excited the admiration of those to whom...
